

Primary Prevention in Schools - Preventing Violence against Women and Children

Whittlesea Community Futures is seeking State Government support to implement a pilot program in schools with a focus on gender equity and respectful relationships to help prevent violence and sexual assault against women and children

What is happening right now?

- 2,110 family violence incidents in 2012-13 were reported to Victoria Police including one homicide (an increase of 35% on the previous year); In 743 of these incidents children were present.<sup>i</sup>
- An average of 41 family violence incidents are reported to Victoria Police every week.
- More than half of all assaults (56%) arose from family violence.
- Family violence was the context for 46% of all rapes and 15% of all other sex offences (95% of the victims were female; 100% of the alleged offenders were male).
- Significantly more referrals (3618) to the regional family violence service from Victoria Police for women from the Whittlesea municipality than from any other municipality in the Northern Metropolitan Region (NMR).<sup>iii</sup>
- In September 2013, Victoria Police attended 170 call outs to family violence incidents in the Whittlesea LGA. Of these, 84% were to recidivist addresses, the highest number for the Northern Division 5.

How can we build a better future?

There is a powerful rationale for embedding education about gender equity and respectful relationships in schools to prevent violence against women and children<sup>v</sup>. Early interventions with children and young people can have a lasting effect on their relationships in the future. Schools are logical sites for violence prevention education because of the volume of young people they engage.

How much will it cost?

Pilot	Resources	Cost (per annum)
Preventing family violence and	Project worker	$100,000
sexual assault: Program targeting	Project materials and resources
young people (whole-of-school	School expenses	$30,000
program)	Evaluation	$15,000
TOTAL (per annum)		$145,000

How will the community benefit?

Children and young people spend much of their time at school. They are a captive audience for teachers and professionals to deliver programs to improve understanding of gender equity, sexual assault and family violence.

By intervening early in life in a universal setting, violence-supportive attitudes and gender stereotypes are challenged and de-normalised. Schools become environments that value and support non-violent norms by building and modelling respectful and equitable gender relations. The entire school community is supported to develop greater connection to formal and informal support and is encouraged to take action to address violence. In the long-term the community benefits from improved safety and reduced rates of family violence and sexual assault that comes from valuing gender equity and respectful relationships.

The prevention of family violence has enormous economic benefits:

- The National Council to Reduce Violence against Women and their Children (2009, p.4) state that reducing all forms of violence against women by 10% by 2012-22 could amount to $1.6 billion in savings<sup>vi</sup>.
- VicHealth (2009, p.64) state that eliminating intimate partner violence would save the health sector $207 million per year and save $1.8 billion in production and leisure costs annually<sup>vii</sup>.
